

Tomb Of Lion Gardiner

Location: United States Of America

The Tomb of Lion Gardiner is a historic monument located in the town of East Hampton, New York. The tomb is the final resting place of Lion Gardiner, an early English settler who played a significant role in the founding and development of the town. Lion Gardiner arrived in what is now East Hampton in 1639, and became one of the leading figures in the community. He was instrumental in the construction of the town's first fortifications, and was appointed commander of the local militia in 1644. He also built a large home on Gardiners Island, which he purchased from local Native American tribes. After his death in 1663, Lion Gardiner was buried in a tomb located on his property on Gardiners Island. The tomb was rediscovered in the 19th century, and was later moved to the South End Cemetery in East Hampton, where it can still be seen today. The tomb is made of brick and stone, and features a plaque bearing an inscription in memory of Lion Gardiner. The tomb is a popular tourist attraction and a significant part of the town's history and heritage. In addition to the tomb, Lion Gardiner's legacy is also celebrated through the Gardiner Foundation, which promotes education, conservation, and cultural initiatives in the town of East Hampton. The foundation is dedicated to preserving the history and heritage of the area and honoring the contributions of early settlers like Lion Gardiner.
